Feedback from participants: (describe any feedback you received from the participants – good and bad – and if you provided a evaluation at the end please provide the results)

Positive feedback according to the evaluation of the trainer for the children's parliament. The summary of the results of the pre and post-evaluation is attached. The evaluation and follow-up officer (Ms. Salwa) also conducted a daily evaluation of the training and a final evaluation after the training and sessions.

Lessons learned (what worked well and what would you do differently next time):

Lessons learned:

Among the negative aspects: The children's parliament members suffer from the rugged Aden-Taiz road.

Positive aspects: Holding parliament sessions at the governorate level is a rather useful experience, as it puts children in the situation of children in Taiz. For example, the city of Taiz suffers from the interruption of roads and safe crossings, which exposes the population to dangers, including children.

We will find among the recommendations calling for the opening of roads and crossings in the city of Taiz for civilians.

Next steps: (is there any follow up to this training/event?)

The children were able to prepare the recommendations of the second session, which include: 1-6 general recommendations.

2-8 recommendations issued by the Human Rights Committee.

3-3 recommendations issued by the Culture and Media Committee.

4-9 recommendations issued by the Education Committee.

5-4 recommendations issued by the Health and Environment Committee.

Each of the children in the governorate they are in will start holding government meetings to deliver recommendations and prepare for an advocacy campaign for the Convention on the Rights of the Child.
