10:45 - 12:15 Working Principles for Developing RoL Contexts
This session is an open invitation to join us in looking for informed divergence of existing routes in policy-making & implementation through a combination of five perspectives: breaking complexity down, stacking communication; gathering creativity; seeking consensus; commitment to action. Based on insights from research in Libya, Mali and Niger on the role of traditional authorities in stabilizing the complex context in the Sahel, we do not call for a ‘system innovation’, but rather for incremental adjustment fueled by the reflections and follow-up actions of the involved professionals. What does it mean to be a policy-maker or implementer and how does that affect your ability to contribute to change processes?

Speakers:
Anne Marie Brinkman & Douwe Buis, BE

14:00 - 15:15 Co-creation: Bridging Research, Policy & Practice?
SRoL research, policy and practice sometimes seem two worlds apart, while they should be of mutual value. During this session, stakeholders from different backgrounds will reflect on and discuss the enabling and disabling factors of a co-creation approach when it comes to bridging gaps between theory and practice. The focus is on three gaps: External interventions & Local perceptions, Practice & Science, and Knowledge & Change. Participants are invited to share and reflect on how a co-creation approach to policy-oriented research can contribute to filling these gaps.

Speakers:
David Betge, ZOA / Faisal Khan, ICCT / Daniel Blocq, Empatix / Jair van der Lijn, SIPRI / Catrien Bijleveld, NSCR

15:30 - 16:45 Making Development Programs PVE Sensitive
The Netherlands MFA has built a toolkit to facilitate the design of development programs in environments of violent extremism. It helps to enhance conflict sensitivity, to improve risk management and analyse root causes of violent extremism from a conflict transformation perspective. The toolkit can also be seen as an innovative modality to enable & encourage learning. It helps policy officers and practitioners to think beyond the traditional pillars of development and security and provides guiding steps for PVE programming. During this session we will explain the background of this toolkit and exchange experiences on its implementation.

Speakers:
Sudi Suleiman, Fia van der Klugt & Jeroen Muntinga, MFA / Fulco van Deventer, Human Security Collective
10:45 - 12:15 Less Pretension, More Realism: Evaluating Programs & Partnerships
The Policy and Operations Evaluation Department (known by its Dutch acronym, IOB) recently published an evaluation of three important programs under the policy priority, Security and Rule of Law: Reconstruction Program, the Strategic Partnerships Chronic Crises Program and the Addressing Root Causes Tender Process. IOB’s report contains lessons and recommendations that have a wider bearing on formulating program and policies for addressing the root causes of conflict aimed at providing sustainable benefits to vulnerable people in situations of insecurity. In this session, participants will discuss the main insights emerging from the evaluation, and what each party involved can do to facilitate the necessary changes.

Speakers:
Marriët Schuurman, Rens Willems & Wilma van Esch, MFA / Remco van der Veen, Cordaid / Marijke Twerda, Netherlands Red Cross

14:00 - 15:15 After 4 Years of SDG 16+: How to Accelerate Local Impact?
After four years of Sustainable Development Goals (SDG) the United Nations SDG-review aims at mobilizing ‘further actions to accelerate implementation’. The 2019 SDG report notes that progress on SDG 16+ and realizing ‘peaceful, just and inclusive societies is still a long way off’. This is worrisome; delivery on SDG16+ impacts progress on all goals, after all. Actors working on peace, justice and inclusion must reflect on how to expedite implementation. This session offers a space for a joint civil society and government rethink of actions needed to accelerate progress on SDG 16+ targets where they matter most: at national and sub-national levels.

Speakers:
Peter van Sluijs, Cordaid / Wilma van Esch, MFA / Wouter Dol, NIMD / Pascal Richard, GPPAC / Katie Davis, HiiL

15:30 - 16:45 Power and Partnerships in 'Crisis Conservation'
This sessions aims to tackle the problems that arise when there is a range of different actors involved in nature conservation in difficult environments, such as in protracted conflict areas. By interrogating dominant power structures, we will try to identify ways to conserve nature that will both contribute to the protection of endangered biodiversity and respect human rights. Going beyond the rhetoric of gender-inclusive, and community-based conservation we will explore how we can implement these principles in practice, while assuring accountability and transparency.

Speakers:
Emmanuel Akampurira & Esther Marijnen, Ghent University / Saidi Kubuya, ASSODIP
Innovating for Human Rights: Breaking Barriers to Partnership

The complex challenges faced by those operating in SRoL and human rights cannot be solved alone. But how do we overcome the structural and political impediments that often inhibit genuine collaboration? How can we nurture partnerships between (non)traditional actors and encourage genuine learning and innovation? FROLIC studio will share its experiences of their KMF-funded collaboration with a human rights NGO to redesign a covert camera used to document human rights abuses around the world. This interactive session will dive into the murkier waters of perceived and real barriers to innovative partnerships, with participants sharing and evaluating their own experiences and proposing viable solutions.

Speakers:
Catriona Hands, FROLIC studio

Community Approaches to Peacebuilding in Securitized Environments

Evidence generated through the learning agenda: Working in securitized environments calls for support and empowerment of community level structures. Where prospects of peace seem elusive, local communities are well placed to engage with parties to the conflict; and find pathways out of violence. They are critical in peace building and conflict resolution processes; including strengthening of civil society initiatives. Community-based organizations and civil society organizations are important vehicles for peacebuilding, socio-economic development, addressing the needs of victims/survivors and maintaining relationships across political division. But we also acknowledge that for impactful change, scaling up is key.

Speakers:
Rukiya Abdulrahman, CDI / Ali Hersi & Madeline Church, Saferworld

Hybrid Security & Justice in Myanmar & South Sudan

International policy and programming continues to focus on state-building, state security and justice provision, despite evidence that ignoring local realities and the existing systems people use undermines these efforts. This session builds on Saferworld’s research in Myanmar and South Sudan, which focused on how plural and hybrid security and justice systems function, and assessed the legitimacy and effectiveness of security and justice providers from the perspective of local populations. It will challenge participants to use their experience to find ways to overcome barriers to ensure programming actually does take into account realities on the ground.

Speakers:
Charlotte Watson, John Bainbridge, Lucian Harriman & Mai Hla Aye, Saferworld

To Collaborate with Authorities or Not: A Practitioner’s Dilemma

As NGOs, we aim to promote SRoL across all levels of society, but in practice the partnership between community-based peace building structures and the state authorities is challenging. Communities trust customary authorities more than the state; and the government does not always welcome influence from the civil society. This session will explore how to bridge the partnership and power gap between community-based peace building work and government authorities at different levels. It will explore how organisations can effectively learn to improve programming results.

Speakers:
Corita Corbijn, ZOA / Abdel-Rahman El-Mahdi, SUDIA / Noelina Nabwile Opiyo, Saferworld
10:45 - 11:45  Gamifying How Citizens & Public Servants Interact – The Role of Aesthetics and Technology

Citizens have a voice in shaping the quality of public services. But why don’t we ever hear this voice? Technology can be a platform for citizens to give their feedback. But data alone cannot influence governments to improve. Those who are serious about improving the justice sector need to involve new disciplines and narratives to incentivize governments to take responsibility. This session is about the role of data, gamification and aesthetics in influencing the citizen-government feedback loop, based on a pilot in Uganda. The gap here is twofold: on the one hand, how do you make sure citizens raise their voice in shaping public services directly? On the other hand, how do you bridge the gap for public servants to feel they have a direct hand in improving their performance and can be proud of the services they provide?

Speakers:
Nathalie Dijkman & Kakuru Timothy, SEMA / Arthur Steiner, Hivos

12:30 - 13:30  There’s an App... for That? Making Innovation Work for Justice

This session will explore contemporary insight on how to create and use innovative justice solutions in expanding access to justice. Drawing on insights from the Basic Investigative Standards App (‘BIS’) as case study, we will share our learning experience in developing and integrating technology-based justice solutions for documenting international crimes such as the challenges and risks to its free use, or the accessibility of funds for promoting and practicing change. We will also challenge participants to reflect on how this gap exists within their organizational context and how to bridge this justice need.

Speakers:
Wayne Jordash, GRC / Yousef Wehbe, Syrian Legal Development Program / Alex Whiting, Prosecutor’s Office in The Hague

14:00 - 15:15 Influential Actors’ Language & Violence: Kenyan Case Study Using AI

We conducted a study on Kenya that takes preliminary steps towards identifying influential actors’ language associated with violence. To this end, an app was created that connected variations in sentiment in language to an objective measure of political violence – daily fatalities as reported via the ACLED Project. The results indicate that our model can predict both increases and decreases in average fatalities for look ahead periods between 50 and 150 days, with overall accuracy approaching 85%. We will address the report’s policy genesis, point to future directions of research, and navigate the ethical dilemmas of an emerging field.

Speakers:
Chris Mahony, Peloria Inc. / Eduardo Albrecht, Mercy College / Rohini Srihari, State University of NY

15:30 - 16:45 Legal Empowerment & the Crisis in Aid for Democracy & RoL

With democracy and the rule of law under attack across the globe, the development community needs to take stock of why decades of aid for democratic and legal institutions has proven apparently ineffective. Legal empowerment provides a lens through which to review this crisis. Focusing on empowering people rather than the state, it complements mainstream, government-centered development efforts in some ways and serves as an alternative in others. Does it offer a way forward for efforts to fortify democracy and the rule of law? Or does its potential - to the extent its potential is worth pursuing - lie elsewhere?

Speakers:
Stephen Golub, International Development Consultant
10:45 - 11:45 Economic Development & Stable Inclusive Governance: Somalia & Beyond
How can we focus on economic development in fragile and conflict affected situations in a way that contributes to more stable inclusive societies? In other words: how can we link SDG8 with SDG16? We'll take Somalia as example and will share good and bad practices for mutual learning.

Speakers:
Jos Meester, Clingendael Institute / Fia van der Klugt, MFA

12:30 - 13:30 Strengthening Capacity of Subnational Governments: Burundi & Rwanda
Capacity strengthening of subnational governments in fragile settings remains a challenge for most development organizations. It is either done in a simplistic manner: outdated knowledge or skills are transferred from the Global North to the Global South, or not contextualized enough. What is the best approach to use? Who/what level of subnational government to target? How to contextualize the approaches? How to build capacity in a sustainable manner? These are some of the questions that many organizations engaging with subnational government are struggling with. The joint CARE NL/THA session will attempt to answer these questions through an interactive discussion.

Speakers:
Lori Cajegas, CARE Nederland / Freddy Sahinguvu, The Hague Academy

14:00 - 15:15 The Missing Piece in SSR: Lessons from 10 years in the DR Congo
This session will highlight a crucial gap in traditional Security Sector Reform (SSR) approaches - addressing the trust deficit between civilians and security forces - and offer locally-anchored, concrete avenues to fill that gap. Panelists will explore lessons-learned from 10 years of SSR interventions by Search for Common Ground (SFCG) in the DR Congo (DRC) and adapting these lessons to inform interventions in Mali. A participatory role-play exercise will enable participants to engage with the challenges of assessing trust-building. An interactive debrief and audience exchange will allow participants to discuss the implications of incorporating trust-building in SSR.

Speakers:
Patrick Mugula, Julien Niankoye, Adrienne Lemon & Charline Burton, SFCG

15:30 - 16:45 Civil Society Influence in Security, Policy & Practice: Creative Problem Solving
With expert speakers taking us through the examples of Tunisia and Lebanon, we will focus on the 'hot topics' of violent extremism and border security to explore why the policy and practice gap exists in these contexts and how civil society has tried to overcome it. We will hear from a representative of a donor state on what works in influencing policy makers before opening up the discussion to a collective, creative brainstorming session aimed at sharing ideas and experiences and identifying effective approaches.

Speakers:
Mariam Abdel Baky & Ilina Slavova, International Alert
